TECHNICAL UPDATE

MAY 2020

TAPERING OF THE ANNUAL ALLOWANCE

What is the Annual Allowance?

The Annual Allowance is the maximum amount of pension input, i.e. contribution that can be made in a tax year without attracting a tax charge. The standard annual allowance is £40,000.

Tapering of Annual Allowance – the position from 6 April 2016

A change to the annual allowance was introduced on 6 April 2016 and updated on 6 April 2020. The Annual Allowance continues to be £40,000 but, from this date, high earners may see their annual allowance in a tax year reduced down to as little as £4,000.

New income definitions have been introduced from 6 April 2016, as follows:-

ADJUSTED INCOME is total income before tax from all sources plus pension contributions made by the employer plus pension contributions made under a 'net pay' arrangement.

THRESHOLD INCOME is total income before tax from all sources plus the amount of employment income given up for pension provision via a salary sacrifice arrangement (started on or after 9 July 2015), less the gross amount of any personal contributions paid into a pension scheme under a 'relief at source' arrangement.

Individuals with Adjusted Income greater than £240,000 in a tax year will have their annual allowance reduced for that year, by £1 for every £2 earned over £240,000. The following table demonstrates this a little better:-

Income	Annual Allowance Available
£240,000	£40,000
£250,000	£35,000
£260,000	£30,000
£280,000	£20,000
£312,000 and over	£4,000

TECHNICAL UPDATE

However, if your threshold income is £200,000 or less, then you will not be affected by tapering, irrespective of your adjusted income figure.

So by making a personal contribution into a pension plan, you may be able to reduce your threshold income to below £200,000, so that you are not affected by tapering.

Equally, a business owner may decide to make an employer pension contribution for themselves from pre-tax profits. This contribution will not be treated as salary sacrifice if it is not a contractual entitlement, so it will not be included in the threshold income calculation.

Individuals who are subject to tapering can still carry forward unused relief from previous years, to increase the amount of relievable pension contribution that can be made. Equally, you can carry forward unused relief from a 'tapering year', but only the balance of your tapered amount.

What if I exceed the Annual Allowance?

Tax relief is only available up to the annual allowance. If your pension input exceeds the annual allowance, then any excess may be subject to a tax charge at your marginal rate of tax, if there is no carry forward available. This is to ensure that any tax relief that has been granted on the pension input is removed.

Examples of how tapering works

Example 1. John has total income of £240,000 and his employer pays £40,000 into his SIPP.

His adjusted income is £280,000, which means that his annual allowance will reduce to £20,000 for the year. The contribution of £40,000 paid by his employer exceeds John's annual allowance by £20,000, so John will personally pay tax on the excess contribution of £20,000.

Example 2. Kathy earns £210,000 and has additional taxable income of £4,000. Her employer pays an £18,000 pension contribution into the company net pay pension plan, which she matches.

Her adjusted income for the year is £250,000, so she thinks that she will be affected by tapering. However, her threshold income calculation is £210,000 less her own pension contribution of £18,000, so threshold income is actually £192,000, meaning that Kathy will not be affected by tapering.

TECHNICAL UPDATE

Example 3. Billy runs his own business and has income of £190,000. He has had a successful year and decides to pay an employer pension contribution of £70,000 into his SSAS, making use of carry forward of unused tax relief.

His adjusted income is £260,000, but as his threshold income figure is £190,000, Billy will not be affected by tapering.

Money Purchase Annual Allowance

Please note, if you have taken advantage of the April 2015 changes and flexibly accessed your benefits, then your ongoing contribution into a money purchase scheme is restricted to just £4,000 p.a. with no carry forward ability.

This is also the case if you were in Flexible Drawdown before April 2015, as you are now deemed to be in Flexi-Access Drawdown.
